The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. Under the current regime, the foreign exchange supply and demand is mainly determined by economic fundamentals, the monetary and fiscal policies implemented, international developments and expectations. The Central Bank of the Republic of Turkey (CBRT) has no nominal or real exchange rate target. The CBRT does not conduct foreign exchange buying or selling transactions to determine the level or direction of the exchange rates. On the other hand, foreign exchange supply and demand developments are closely monitored to make sure that the foreign exchange market operates efficiently. In the event of excessive fluctuations in exchange rates detached from economic fundamentals, the CBRT may intervene through buying or selling transactions. The CBRT announced the general framework of the monetary and exchange rate policies envisaged for 2021 in a document titled “Monetary and Exchange Rate Policy for 2021” on December 16, 2021. The CBRT applies a reserve option mechanism (ROM) as a monetary policy tool. In this framework, the CBRT allows banks to hold a fraction of their mandatory reserves for lira liabilities in foreign currency and gold. The CBRT may increase or decrease the reserve option coefficients (ROCs), the amount of foreign currency or gold required to meet one unit of TL required reserves (RR). Typically, the ROC is an increasing function of different tranches of lira RR; the tranches of the mechanism and the corresponding levels of ROC are determined by the CBRT. The ROM has been used as an active policy tool by the CBRT and has contributed to stabilization of capital flow volatility, indirectly influencing exchange rate movement. Foreign exchange ROM facility will be terminated in October 2021. In 2020, the CBRT continued swap transactions to contribute to the TL and foreign exchange liquidity management of banks. TL currency swap transactions via the quotation method with one-week maturity, which was introduced on November 1, 2018; Borsa İstanbul (BIST) Swap Market transactions, which was started May 15, 2019, and swap auctions conducted via the traditional method, which was launched on August 5, 2019, were used in line with the banks' needs. The one-week repo auction rate was valid for the TL interest rate in swap transactions conducted via the quotation method and BIST Swap Market transactions.

Moreover, taking into account the needs and demands of banks regarding maturity and liquidity management, following the Banking Regulation and Supervision Agency (BRSA) regulations on domestic banks' swap transactions with nonresidents and the increase in banks' use of the CBRT swap facilities aftermath, the limits for swap operations conducted at the CBRT were raised as well. In this context, effective April 3, 2020, the total limit of outstanding swap transactions conducted via the quotation method at the TL Currency Swap Market was increased to 30% of the banks' total transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Market from 20%. Moreover, the total limit of outstanding TL currency swap transactions conducted via the traditional (multi-price) auction method was gradually raised from 20% to 60% of banks' total transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets. In addition, the unused portion of the total limit of outstanding swap transactions conducted via the traditional auction method was decided to be transferred to banks' transaction limits at the TL Currency Swap Market effective February 25, 2020.

To contain possible adverse effects of the global uncertainty led by the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic on the Turkish economy, the CBRT announced certain measures effective March 17, 2020. In this context, it was announced that conventional (multi-price) swap auctions with maturities of one, three, and six months, which were currently available against US dollars, could also be held against euros and gold. Moreover, banks were offered targeted additional liquidity facilities to secure uninterrupted credit flow to the corporate sector and accordingly. TL currency swap auctions with a maturity of one year based on quantity auction method were started. With these swap auctions, related banks were provided with TL liquidity against US dollars, euros, and gold with an interest rate 100 basis points lower than the one-week repo rate, that is, policy rate. Effective March 31, 2020, in addition to the TL currency swap auctions with a maturity of one year, it was decided also hold TL currency swap auctions with a maturity of six months. Through these swap auctions with six-month maturity, related banks were provided with TL liquidity against US dollars at an interest rate 125 basis points lower than the one-week repo rate, that is, the CBRT's policy rate.

In 2020, depending on market conditions, the CBRT continued to conduct the TL cash-settled foreign exchange futures transactions, which were launched on August 31, 2018, at the Derivatives Market (VIOP) operating under the BIST. The CBRT also continued to conduct TL Gold Swap Market and Foreign Exchange Gold Swap Market transactions, which were started in 2019 to increase the effectiveness of banks' liquidity management and to contribute to the inclusion of gold savings into the financial system. Moreover, effective March 17, 2020, TL gold swap auctions with traditional (multi-price) method were initiated to contribute to the TL and foreign exchange liquidity management of banks.

As a result of the significant rise in gold prices in global markets because of the economic uncertainties caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, residents' gold demand increased in 2020. Hence, to meet local gold demand, banks used Gold Against Foreign Exchange

Market at the CBRT extensively. Moreover, CBRT started to sell gold against foreign exchange at the BIST Precious Metals and Diamond Market and started to carry out location swap transactions with banks. Purchases of gold domestically produced from ore against TL, which was suspended starting from October 2020, restarted on May 3, 2021.

CBRT, in line with its current monetary policy, conducts swap transactions in the BIST Swap Market.

Stock and flow data regarding the swap transactions conducted by the CBRT with banks in domestic markets and TL cash-settled foreign exchange futures transactions conducted on the BIST Derivatives Market have been released on a daily basis starting from January 4, 2021, on the CBRT's website under the heading Statistics/Markets Data. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating.

Official exchange rate

Yes. There is no official exchange rate determined by the CBRT. However, there is an indicative rate, which is determined through six CBRT observations between 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m., at one-hour intervals, taking the average value of the averages of the buying and selling rates as quoted by banks in the interbank foreign exchange market for US$1. The arithmetic average of the six observed values thus obtained is the CBRT's midrate for US$1. The buying and selling rates for US$1 are calculated based on the midrate. Similarly, the respective cross-rates of the currencies for which the CBRT announces indicative exchange rates are collected between 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. at one-hour intervals. The indicative exchange rates are announced at 3:30 p.m. and used for accounting transactions and some branch transactions of the CBRT, but there are no mandatory rates for individuals or entities.

To support the foreign exchange liquidity, the transaction limits of the banks in the CBRT Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets were increased by approximately 130% to US$50 billion (as calculated by current EURUSD parity) on September 1, 2015. Effective March 4, 2020, the selling rate for foreign exchange deposits at one-week maturity was reduced from 3.50% to 3.00% and at one-month maturity from 4.25% to 3.75% for USD. The rates are announced through Anadolu Agency DV006, Reuters CBTJ, and Bloomberg CBT pages.

The buying rate on collateral foreign exchange deposits for the EUR remains at 0%.

On November 1, 2018, TL currency swap market was opened to enhance banks' efficiency in TL and foreign exchange liquidity management. These transactions are conducted at one-week maturities via quotation method with banks, and the maximum amount for these transactions is limited to 30% (effective April 21, 2020) of the banks' pre-determined transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Market. To contribute to liquidity management of banks, it was decided that TL currency swap transactions, which are executed with one-week maturity via the quotation method, were also executed with one-, three-, and six-month maturities via the traditional (multi-price) auction method starting from August 5, 2019. These transactions were limited to 20% of the banks' pre-determined transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Market when the facility was launched. In 2020, the total limit of outstanding TL currency swap transactions via the traditional (multi-price) auction method was gradually raised effective April 3, 2020, to 30%, effective May 5, 2020, to 40%, effective May 21, 2020 to 50%, and effective November 25, 2020, to 60% of banks' total transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets. Effective April 25, 2020, the unused portion of the total limit of outstanding swap transactions conducted via the traditional auction method was decided to be transferred to banks' transaction limits at the TL Currency Swap Market.

The CBRT, in line with its current monetary policy, conducts transactions in the BIST Swap Market at various maturities as well. To contain possible adverse effects of the global uncertainty led by the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic on the Turkish economy, the CBRT took certain measures on March 17, 2020. Banks were offered targeted additional liquidity facilities to secure uninterrupted credit flow to the corporate sector. Within this framework, TL currency swap auctions against USD and EUR based on quantity auction method were started.

In 2020, the foreign exchange demand of US$5.985 billion of energy-importing state-owned enterprises was met by the CBRT via direct selling method.

The CBRT started to purchase of gold domestically produced from ore against TL in 2018 to contribute inclusion of gold savings into the financial system. On August 15, 2018, foreign exchange against gold market and location swap facilities were introduced. The CBRT conducts gold buying and selling transactions against foreign exchange in its spot market and location swap transactions as the banks demand. The commission rate charged over the TL equivalent of gold deposited to a custody center abroad in gold location swap transactions was reduced from 5 per ten thousand to 0 on September

In the same manner, to contribute inclusion of gold savings into the financial system and the liquidity management of banks, a TL Gold Swap Market (for transactions on the buy side) was introduced on May 6, 2019. The CBRT gradually raised the initial limit for TL Gold Swap Market from 100 tons, respectively, to 112 tons (effective April 22, 2020), 116 tons (effective August 21, 2020), and finally 119.5 tons (effective October 22, 2020). In addition, Foreign Exchange Gold Swap Markets (for transactions on both the buy and sell sides) were introduced on October 2, 2019. Initial limit for Foreign Exchange Gold Swap Market was assigned as 100 tons for each (buy/sell) side. For the sell side, limit has been maintained at same level, whereas buying limit was raised gradually from 100 tons, respectively, to 112 tons (effective February 3, 2020), 128 tons (effective August 7, 2020), and finally 133.5 tons (effective September 1, 2020).

The CBRT also started to sell gold against foreign exchange at the BIST Precious Metals and Diamond Market on September 25, 2020, and buy gold against TL on June 14, 2021.

The CBRT may intervene directly or through flexible auctions in the market, in case of unhealthy price formations because of speculative behavior stemming from a loss in market depth. The CBRT has issued the following auction guidelines for Foreign Exchange Buying-Selling Auctions against TL: (1) Only banks authorized to operate in Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets in the CB may participate in intraday auctions. (2) The number and other details of the auction are announced through Reuters CBTQ, Bloomberg CBT/Foreign Exchange Auctions, and Anadolu Agency DV007 pages. Following the announcement of the auction, banks may submit their offers within 15 minutes. (3) Offers may be sent via the CBRT Payment Systems Auction System (IhS). (4) Auctions are held under the multiple price method. (5) The results of the auctions are announced through Reuters CBTQ, Bloomberg CBT/Foreign Exchange Auctions, and Anadolu Agency DV007 pages within 15 minutes of the deadline for submission of the offers. (6) The minimum offer amount is US$1 million and larger amounts in multiples thereof. (7) The maximum bid amount for each bank is limited to 10% of the total auction amount. (8) Banks may not change their offer amounts and/or prices during the auction. (9) The full amount of offers received is met up to the auction amount. (10) If there is more than one offer at the price at which the auction is finalized, the distribution is made on pro-rata basis. (11) Banks that do not fulfill their obligations arising from the auctions are subject to the sanctions specified in the Implementation Instructions of the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets.

Since December 2014, the CBRT continues to supply foreign exchange to energy state-owned enterprises. Foreign exchange is provided directly by selling from CBRT currency rate; there is no auction.

With the aim of enhancing flexibility and instrument diversity of the TL and foreign exchange liquidity management within the current monetary and exchange rate policy framework, the CBRT held foreign exchange deposits against TL deposit auctions between January 18, 2017, and March 22, 2019, and conducted TL-settled forward foreign exchange sale auctions between November 20, 2017, and December 31, 2018. However, the CBRT continued to conduct

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions Yes.

Borrowing abroad No.

Banks and financial leasing companies, factoring companies, and financing companies, which are resident in Turkey, can freely use foreign currency credits from abroad.

TURKEY

Maintenance of accounts abroad	No.
Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits)	Yes.	Banks, financial leasing companies, factoring companies, financing companies resident in Turkey, and other persons determined by the ministry operating in Turkey may extend credit in foreign exchange to nonresidents. Such credit may also be extended in liras.
Lending locally in foreign exchange	Yes.	In an attempt to contain risks associated with resident foreign exchange borrowing, an amendment on foreign exchange legislation has been put into force from May 2, 2018 (Official Gazette No. 30312 of January 25, 2018). With the new legislation, in general Turkish residents, who do not have income in foreign currency, cannot take loans in foreign currency domestically or from abroad. The rule will be applied to all Turkish residents apart from those which have some special conditions. For residents that have income in foreign currency who have foreign exchange liabilities less than US$15 million, can borrow in foreign exchange according to a limit which does not exceed the sum of their foreign exchange income of the last three fiscal years. Previously, no such limit was in place. Natural persons resident in Turkey cannot use foreign currency credits domestically or from abroad. Residents in Turkey cannot use foreign currency indexed credits domestically or from abroad. With the amendment, most of the exceptions in the former regulation were preserved. However, according to previous regulation, banks could extend foreign exchange credit to residents without considering whether they have foreign currency income or not, if the credit has an average maturity exceeding one year and is in an amount not less than US$5 million. With the new regulation, this exception was removed and the rule of borrowing in foreign currency according to a limit which does not exceed the sum of foreign currency income of last three fiscal years has been put into practice for ensuring the firms borrow prudently and manage their foreign exchange risk efficiently.
Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange	No.
Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange	Yes.
Reserve requirements	Yes.	Banks (including participation banks) and financing companies must maintain reserve requirements at the CBRT for deposits and other liabilities. Reserve requirement ratios (RRRs) of financing companies have been 0% since June 14, 2019. (Previously, these RRRs were the same as those of banks subject to RRRs.) Effective March 6, 2020, but announced March 7, 2020, the CBRT made changes to the reserve requirement framework for both TL and foreign-currency RRRs to channel loan supply toward productive and production-oriented sectors. Accordingly, banks will be able to benefit from reserve requirement incentives under the following conditions and the practice of applying the same RRRs to all banks was abandoned: For banks with a real annual loan growth rate above 15%: If their adjusted real loan growth rate, which is calculated by deducting the entire real changes in loans with a longer-than-two-year maturity extended to selected sectors and housing loans with a five-year and longer maturity from the numerator of the growth rate formula, is below 15%. For banks with a real annual loan growth rate below 15%: If their adjusted real loan growth rate, which is calculated by deducting 75% of the real change in retail loans excluding housing loans with a five- year and longer maturity and the entire TL loans extended—starting from March 9, 2020, to facilitate early repayment or early restructuring of foreign exchange cash loans from the numerator of the growth rate formula, is above 5%.

Selected sectors have been determined according to the Statistical Classification of Economic Activities in the European Community (NACE) as follows:

Section A: Agriculture, Forestry, and Fishing;
 Section B: Mining and Quarrying;
 Section C: Manufacturing (with some exceptions);
 Section D: Electricity, Gas, Steam, and Air Conditioning Supply;
 Section H: Transportation and Storage;
 Section I: Accommodation and Food Service Activities;
 Section J: Information and Communication.

Effective June 12, 2020, but announced June 20, 2020, the CBRT made further changes to the reserve requirement framework to provide banks with flexibility in meeting the loan demand specific to the pandemic by temporarily (until the year end) suspending the enforcement of the rule of having adjusted real loan growth rate below 15% for the banks with a real annual loan growth rate above 15% to be able to benefit from reserve requirement incentives.

Effective December 11, 2020, but announced November 27, 2020, the CBRT made further changes to the reserve requirement framework to simplify it:

- (1) the practice to link the RRRs and remuneration rates to real loan growth rates was repealed;
- (2) the same RRRs and remuneration rates were applied to all banks; and
- (3) set the TL RRRs as follows:

(1) Demand deposits, notice deposits, private current accounts, and deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to one month and three months: 6%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(2) Deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to six months: 4%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(3) Deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to one year: 2%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(4) Deposits and participation accounts with one-year or longer maturity: 1%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(5) Other liabilities up to one-year maturity (including one year): 6%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(6) Other liabilities up to three-year maturity (including three years): 3.5%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(7) Other liabilities longer than three-year maturity: 1%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

(8) Borrower funds of investment banks: 6%. Previously, the RRRs varied across banks based on their real loan growth rates.

Effective February 19, 2021, RRRs on TL liabilities were raised by 200 bps and set as follows:

- (1) Demand deposits, notice deposits, private current accounts, and deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to one month and three months: 8%. Previously, they were 6%.

(2) Deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to six months: 6%. Previously, they were 4%.

(3) Deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to one year: 4%. Previously, they were 2%.

(4) Deposits and participation accounts with one-year or longer maturity: 3%. Previously, they were 1%.

(5) Other liabilities up to one-year maturity (including one year): 8%. Previously, they were 6%.

(6) Other liabilities up to three-year maturity (including three years): 5.5%. Previously, they were 3.5%.

(7) Other liabilities longer than three-year maturity: 3%. Previously, they were 1%.

(8) Borrower funds of investment banks: 8%. Previously, they were 6%.

The aforementioned changes to the reserve requirement framework with regard to linking the RRRs to banks' real loan growth from March 2020 also applied to RRRs on foreign currency noncore liabilities. As in the case of TL RRRs, RRRs on banks' foreign currency noncore liabilities were unified for all banks effective December 11, 2020, and were set as follows:

(1) Demand deposits, notice deposits, private current accounts, and deposits/participation accounts up to one-month, three-month, six-month, and one-year maturities: 19%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

(2) Deposits/participation accounts with one-year or longer maturity: 13%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

(3) Other liabilities up to one year (including one year): 22%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

(4) Other liabilities up to two-year maturity (including two years): 16%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

(5) Other liabilities up to three-year maturity (including three years): 11%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

(6) Other liabilities up to five-year maturity (including five years): 7%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

(7) Other liabilities longer than five-year maturity: 5%. Previously, the varied across banks depending on their real loan growth.

Effective August 19, 2021, the RRRs on foreign currency liabilities (including gold deposit accounts) are set as follows:

(1) Demand deposits, notice deposits, private current accounts, and deposits/participation accounts up to one-month, three-month, six-month, and one-year maturities: increased to 21% from 19%.

(2) Deposits/participation accounts with one-year or longer maturity: increased to 15% from 13%.

(3) Other liabilities up to one-year maturity (including one year): unchanged at 21%.

(4) Other liabilities up to two-year maturity (including two years): unchanged at 16%.

(5) Other liabilities up to three-year maturity (including three years): unchanged at 11%.

(6) Other liabilities up to five-year maturity (including five years):

unchanged at 7%.

(7) Other liabilities longer than five-year maturity: unchanged at 5%.

Since the reserve requirement framework was simplified effective December 11, 2020, the RRRs on precious metal deposit accounts are as follows:

(1) Demand deposits, notice deposits, private current accounts, and deposits/participation accounts up to one-month, three-month, six-month, and one-year maturities: 22%. Previously, they varied across banks depending on their real loan growth rate.

(2) One-year and longer-than-one-year maturity: 18%. Previously, they varied across banks depending on their real loan growth rate.

According to the Press Release No. 2016/2, development and investment banks' borrower funds were subject to reserve requirements and RRRs for these liabilities are equal to RRRs of "Demand deposits, notice deposits, private current accounts, and deposits and participation accounts with maturities up to one month and three months."

With the aim of narrowing the cost differential of meeting the lira reserve requirements in liras or foreign exchange, the ROM was launched September 16, 2011. The ROM expresses the structure that allows banks and financing companies to keep a certain ratio of lira reserve requirements in foreign exchange and standard gold and from September 1, 2016, wrought or scrap gold collected by banks from residents.

Since July 27, 2018, in addition to US dollars, euro can be used for the maintenance against TL reserves under the ROM.

As announced January 18, 2020, and effective January 10, 2020, the upper limit for the standard gold maintenance facility within the ROM has been lowered from 30% to 20%.

As announced January 18, 2020, and effective January 10, 2020, the upper limit of the facility of holding standard gold converted from wrought or scrap gold collected from residents has been increased from 10% to 15% of TL reserve requirements.

As announced February 24, 2021, and effective February 19, 2021, the upper limit for the foreign exchange maintenance facility within the ROM has been decreased from 30% to 20% of TL reserve requirements.

As announced February 24, 2021, and effective February 19, 2021, the upper limit for the standard gold maintenance facility within the ROM has been lowered from 20% to 15%.

As announced July 1, 2021, and effective August 6, 2021, to improve the effectiveness of monetary transmission mechanism, the upper limit of the facility for holding foreign exchange was decreased from 20% to 10% of TL reserve requirements. The ROM facility will be terminated effective October 1, 2021.

RR for banks and finance companies must be held in US dollars for liabilities in US dollars, and in US dollars or euros for liabilities in other foreign currencies.

Gold deposit accounts are subject to a reserve requirement. Total RR for precious metal deposit accounts may be maintained as standard gold. Domestic currency reserve requirements are maintained on a two-week-average basis. Banks may carry over 5% of excess or deficiency of their lira RR in one maintenance period to be used or made up only in the following maintenance period; the RR for foreign exchange liabilities must be held in special accounts with the CBRT; 4% may be maintained on a two-week-average basis.

		In case of noncompliance with the required reserve obligations, banks and financing companies must hold non-interest-bearing deposits with the CBRT. The deposit must be twice the deficient amount of domestic currency RR and three times the deficient amount of foreign exchange RR and must be in liras and US dollars, respectively.
Liquid asset requirements	Yes.	Foreign currency deposits/participation funds are treated as less stable deposits/participation funds and 10% runoff rate is applied to foreign exchange retail deposits, whereas 5% runoff rate is applied to national currency deposits. This implementation is in compliance with Basel III LCR Framework. The two LCRs deposit and participation banks must maintain are such that the total LCR must be 100% and foreign exchange LCR must be 80%. (LCR will remain intact as minimum 100% however banks are allowed to operate below that minimum ratio until year end in 2020.)

Floating	Yes.	The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The authorities intervene in Uganda's foreign exchange market when short-term fluctuations jeopardize its orderly operation. The Bank of Uganda (BOU) intervenes in the interbank foreign exchange market (IFEM) at the banks' quoted rates using the best bid-ask principle.

UGANDA

Free floating		The BOU publishes information on its interventions in its bimonthly, quarterly state of the economy, and annual reports. The information includes amounts purchased and sold through the reserve buildup program, interventions, and targeted transactions. The data are made available in the Monetary Policy Report two weeks following the MPC Meeting. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is floating.
Official exchange rate	Yes.	The daily official exchange rate is calculated as the midrate computed from the simple average interbank quotes of exchange rates for purchases and sales of foreign exchange. The average rate for the previous month is used by the customs authority for tax computation on imports. The BOU's foreign exchange transactions with government (ministries, departments, and agencies) are conducted at the day's opening spot rates.

Core inflation	Yes.	Inflation target is expressed as average annual core inflation. Core inflation excludes energy, fuel, and utilities and food crops.
Target horizon	Yes.	The target horizon stands at 1–3 years.
Operating target (policy rate)	Yes.
Policy rate	Yes.	The policy rate used by the CB is the Central Bank Rate (CBR). The CBR was 6.5% as of June 2021. The short-term policy rate that is guided by the CBR is the seven-day interest rate.
Target corridor band	Yes.	The monetary policy framework uses the BOU interest rate (called the CBR) as a signaling device of the monetary policy stance to meet the inflation target. The CBR guides the seven-day interbank money market rate, which is the operational target of monetary policy. The seven-day interbank money market rate can fluctuate within a band of, effective June 8, 2020, $\pm 2$ (previously $\pm 3$ ) percentage points around the CBR without the BOU intervention. The CBR as of end-June 2021 was 6.5%. The rediscount rate is set as the CBR plus a margin of 3 percentage points, and the Bank Rate (the rate at which commercial banks borrow from the BOU through the Lombard window) at a margin of 4 percentage points.

Open letter	No.
Parliamentary hearings	Yes.	The BOU is statutorily expected to appear before Parliament to answer queries that may arise from the Auditor General's report. The frequency of these hearings depends on whether there are any issues raised by the Auditor General.

Publication of minutes	No.	The minutes of the meetings of the MPC are not published.
Publication of inflation forecasts	Yes.	Every two months inflation forecasts are published in the MPC Statement and Reports that follow the MPC meetings.

Exchange tax	No.
Exchange subsidy	No.
Foreign exchange market	Yes.	Commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus are free to set exchange rates and commissions in transactions with their clients.
Spot exchange market	Yes.	The BOU is authorized to grant licenses to deal in foreign exchange. ADs include commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus. ADs may freely determine their bid-ask spreads and foreign exchange commissions in transactions in the retail market with their clients. However, ADs that participate in the wholesale market (IFEM) must maintain a 10 shilling spread on the bid-ask quotes they post on the Reuters Dealing System. Foreign exchange bureaus may operate if they are licensed by the BOU and adhere to the Foreign Exchange Act (FEA) and regulations. There were 212 authorized foreign exchange bureaus as of December 31, 2020, which engaged in transactions with commercial banks and the public, but not with the BOU. There are no restrictions on foreign exchange bureaus' accounts abroad, although their operations are limited to spot transactions and OTC purchases and sales of foreign currency. There are special licenses permitting foreign exchange bureaus to transfer or receive funds to or from abroad on behalf of their clients, which they must perform through international money transfer agencies or domestic banks, with which they must maintain an account for clients' funds. As of December 31, 2020, there were 82 entities licensed to carry out money remittance business.

Operated by the central bank	Yes.
Foreign exchange standing facility	No.
Allocation	No.
Auction	Yes.	The BOU occasionally intervenes in the interbank foreign exchange rate market to stem volatility. It also conducts opportunistic purchases of US dollars to build up reserves. These interventions take place through auctions conducted using the Reuters Dealing System. Participation in the IFEM is restricted to Tier 1 financial institutions. The BOU Act 2000, Section 19, authorizes the auctioning of foreign currency and states that "the bank may buy and sell foreign currency at rates determined by market conditions and on terms that may be determined by the Board." Since August 2010, the BOU has been conducting opportunistic purchases for reserve building through auctions on a daily basis depending on the prevailing IFEM conditions, as ensuring smooth and stable exchange rate movements takes precedence over reserve buildup. Interventions in the IFEM are only conducted when the market experiences high volatility of the shilling. Intervention amounts are not announced in advance. In conducting intervention, the banks that are hit on the Reuters Dealing System by the CB at their quoted rate are obligated to execute a transaction for a minimum of US$250,000. Participants that default to deliver/settle are charged interest on the amount owed for each day of the default at the prevailing LIBOR. Participants are not required to use the acquired foreign currency for any specific purpose. Commercial banks that are members of the IFEM may participate. The intervention amounts are announced with a lag in the CB's Monetary Policy, State of the Economy, and Annual reports.
Fixing	No.
Interbank market	Yes.	In the IFEM, as of June 30, 2021, 23 banks (excluding the CB) traded among themselves. The BOU intervenes in the IFEM at the commercial banks' quoted rates, using the best bid-ask principle. Participants in the IFEM must maintain a 10 shilling spread on the bid-ask quotes they post on the Reuters Dealing System.

Regional arrangements	Yes.	Uganda remains a signatory to the East African Payment System master agreement, which it signed in 2011. Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices	Yes.	The IMF staff report for the Request for Stand-By Arrangement with Ukraine states that as of June 2, 2020, Ukraine continues to maintain one exchange restriction and two MCPs, but a roadmap is in place to gradually phase them out. The exchange restriction arises from limits on the availability of foreign exchange for certain non-trade current international transactions (the limit on corporates' investments abroad may capture some current transactions). The MCPs arise from: (1) the use of multiple price foreign exchange auctions conducted by the National Bank of Ukraine (NBU) without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the auction and market exchange rates and (2) the use of the official exchange rate for exchange transactions with the government without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the official exchange rate and market exchange rates. (Country Report No. 20/197)
Exchange measures imposed for security reasons	Yes.	Effective April 28, 2020, Law of Ukraine No. 361-IX of December 6, 2019, on Preventing and Combating Money Laundering, the Financing of Terrorism, and the Financing of Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction was adopted to replace Law of Ukraine No. 1702-VII of October 14, 2014, on Preventing and Combating Money Laundering, the Financing of Terrorism, and the Financing of Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction; Law of Ukraine No. 1644-VII of August 14, 2014, on Sanctions (entered into force September 12, 2014).
In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51)	Yes.	Restrictions established by the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine in accordance with UNSC resolutions remain in place for certain transactions with the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Democratic Republic of Somalia, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Guinea-Bissau, Lebanon, and South Sudan. Effective February 1, 2021, restrictions also apply to certain transactions with Nicaragua and, effective February 19, 2021, with Mali and Yemen. Restrictions with respect to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, the Taliban, and Al-Qaida remain in place. The sanctions against Iran have not been repealed, but the mechanism for their introduction has been changed. Resolution No. 1092 of the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine of September 5, 2007, on Implementation of UNSC Resolutions Concerning the Islamic Republic of Iran was in effect until November 18, 2016 (became inoperative by virtue of Resolution of the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine No. 786, dated November 9, 2016). Sanctions are now introduced by a decision of the Ukraine National Security and Defense Council, and in particular with respect to Iran: Ukraine National Security and Defense Council Decisions of May 20, 2016, on Implementation of UNSC Resolution No. 2231 of July 20, 2015, Concerning the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action with Respect to Sectoral Sanctions (introduced by Decree No. 254/2016 of the President of Ukraine of June 15, 2016, and approved by Ukraine Supreme Council Resolution No. 1471-VIII of July 14, 2016), and on Implementation of UNSC Resolution No. 2231 of July 20, 2015, Concerning the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action with Respect to Personal Sanctions (introduced by Decree No. 254/2016 of the President of Ukraine of June 15, 2016).

In its Directive No. 360-r, dated April 29, 2016, the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine proposed imposing personal sanctions on certain individuals and legal entities of Iran, including the freezing of assets (suspension of debit transactions in accounts) that are owned by or under the control of such individuals or legal entities, up to October 18, 2023. In accordance with a decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine dated May 20, 2016, “Concerning Implementation of UNSC Resolution No. 2231, dated July 20, 2015, Regarding the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action on Personal Sanctions” (introduced by Order of the President of Ukraine No. 254/2016, dated June 15, 2016), personal sanctions against these individuals and legal entities of Iran were imposed up to October 18, 2018.

From the moment of the entry into force (May 17, 2017) of Decree No. 133/2017 of the President of Ukraine of May 15, 2017, on the Decision of the Ukraine National Security and Defense Council of April 28, 2017, on the Application of Personal Special Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions) pursuant to which sanctions were applied to 1,228 individuals and 468 legal entities, the following were repealed: Decree No. 549/2015 of the President of Ukraine of September 16, 2015, which implemented the decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of September 2, 2015, on the Application of Special Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions) with respect to 388 individuals and 105 legal entities; Decree No. 121/2016 of the President of Ukraine of March 29, 2016, which implemented the decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of March 25, 2016, on the Application of Special Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions) with respect to 84 individuals; Decree No. 224/2016 of the President of Ukraine of May 27, 2016, which implemented the decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of May 20, 2016, on the Application of Additional Special Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions) with respect to 17 individuals; Decree No. 467/2016 of the President of Ukraine of October 17, 2016, on the Decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of September 16, 2016, on the Application of Special Personal Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions), which in due course extended special personal economic and other restrictive measures (sanctions) established by the decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of September 2, 2015 (as amended by decisions of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of September 17, 2015, and May 20, 2016), that was implemented by Decree No. 549/2015 of the President of Ukraine of September 16, 2015 (with respect to 347 individuals and 104 legal entities), and also applied sanctions to 335 individuals and 167 legal entities; Decree No. 63/2017 of the President of Ukraine of March 15, 2015 [sic], put into force the decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of March 15, 2017, on the Application of Special Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions) with respect to five banks for a period of one year; Decree No. 57/2018 of the President of Ukraine of March 6, 2018, which implemented the decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine of March 1, 2018, on the Application of Special Economic and Other Restrictive Measures (Sanctions), extended these sanctions for one year against four of the five banks. Floating Yes. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as floating. The NBU maintains a floating exchange rate arrangement, meaning that monetary policy will not be aimed at achieving a certain exchange rate target or range. At the same time, the NBU may use foreign currency interventions for the purpose of accumulating international reserves, smoothing out the functioning of the foreign exchange market, and maintaining the transmission of the key interest rate as the main monetary policy instrument.

In March 2020, deteriorating conditions in the global financial and commodity markets, combined with heightened uncertainty in the domestic market, triggered a surge in foreign exchange market turbulence. The NBU stepped up efforts to intervene in the foreign exchange market to smooth out excessive exchange rate fluctuations without counteracting market trends. The hryvnia weakened by 14.3% from February to March as measured at the end of the month. But, since the situation in the Publication of minutes	Yes.	In February 2018, the NBU began to publish on a regular basis the Results of Key Discount Rate Discussions by Members of the NBU MPC. The MPC serves as a discussion platform and includes all members of the NBU Board and directors of the NBU departments involved in monetary policy decision-making. Publication of the discussion results helps market participants anticipate further changes in the NBU's monetary policy and, as a result, increases the efficiency of the interest rate channel of the transmission mechanism and allows more effective management of inflation expectations by the NBU. Without identifying individual members, this document details the views of all MPC members on necessary monetary policy decisions with relevant arguments from the majority as well as alternative views.

Publication of inflation forecasts	Yes.	The inflation report, with an inflation forecast, is published quarterly. Since July 2019, the NBU has been publishing a key rate forecast as a part of the quarterly revisions of the macroeconomic forecast. The NBU updates the key discount rate forecast along with other indicators on a quarterly basis and publishes it in the inflation report.

Residents and nonresidents may conduct foreign exchange operations involving the purchase of noncash foreign currency and/or the transfer of foreign currency/domestic currency if there are grounds/obligations for such operations, which must be confirmed by relevant documents presented to banks for the performance of a purchase or to authorized institutions for the performance of a transfer (NBU Executive Board Resolution No. 2, dated January 2, 2019).

Banks must thoroughly analyze and verify documents (information) concerning foreign exchange operations that support the purchase of foreign currency for settlements/transfers of funds outside Ukraine or to current accounts of nonresident legal entities in Ukraine, if the presentation of the relevant documents (information) is provided for by the legislation of Ukraine (NBU Board Resolution No. 8 of January 2, 2019).

It is possible to perform a transaction involving the purchase of foreign currency without presentation of supporting documents by the customer to the servicing bank if the amount of the transaction (in equivalent terms) is less than the threshold level for financial transactions. Effective April 28, 2020, this amount is UAH 400,000, whereas previously it was UAH 150,000, as provided for by Article 20 of Law of Ukraine No. 361-IX of December 6, 2019, on Preventing and Combating Money Laundering, the Financing of Terrorism, and the Financing of Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction, except when foreign exchange operations are broken down into smaller transactions. In this case the customer presents to the bank only a request for the purchase of foreign currency, which also contains information about the purposes for which the foreign currency is being purchased, and about documents on the basis of which the foreign currency is being purchased.

Individuals purchase foreign currency without the presentation of supporting documents to the servicing bank. As of July 20, 2021, residents (legal entities and individual entrepreneurs) are allowed to purchase noncash foreign currency also without grounds/obligations supporting the need for such a transaction (that is, without presenting documents to the servicing bank that support the need to purchase foreign currency for certain purposes, and accordingly without indicating the purpose for the purchase of the foreign currency): within the daily limit of 100,000 euros (in equivalent terms) established for transactions by a single resident involving the purchase of foreign currency without grounds/obligations.

(2) The assets must be of a sufficient amount, and of an appropriate currency and maturity, to ensure that the cash inflows from those assets will meet the expected cash outflows from the company's insurance liabilities as they become due. The IFRS 17 Insurance Contracts was issued on May 18, 2017, and is set to enter into force January 1, 2023.

Specifically, they may have majority ownership if their activity is in a sector set out in the positive list adopted in Cabinet Resolution No. 16/2020. For all other sectors, the requirement of a majority shareholding of more than 50% held by an UAE national still applies, with higher thresholds being applicable in certain sectors (for example, in banking it is no less than 60% pursuant to Article 76 of the United Arab Emirates Central Bank Law). Previously, at least 51% of the equity of companies other than foreign company branches had to be held by Emirati citizens. Citizens of GCC countries could hold (1) up to 100% of the equity of companies in the industrial, agricultural, fisheries, and construction sectors as of November 2005 and (2) up to 100% of the equity of companies in the hotel industry.

Floating

Free floating Yes. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are free floating. The exchange rate of the pound sterling is determined on the basis of supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. The Bank of England (BOE) has a separate pool of foreign exchange reserves, which it uses at its discretion to intervene in support of its monetary policy objectives. A monthly press release issued by Her Majesty's Treasury (HMT) reports HMT and BOE intervention.

Official exchange rate Yes. The BOE calculates indicative exchange rates on a daily basis and publishes these on its website. These are not official rates. Exchange rates are determined as middle spot rates prevailing in the market at a given point in time. Separately, the BOE provides exchange rates to the IMF for SDR calculations and these rates are published daily by the IMF on their website.

Monetary aggregate target

Inflation-targeting framework Yes.

Target setting body Yes.

Government Yes. The BOE's monetary policy objective is to deliver price stability – low inflation – and, subject to that, to support the government's economic objectives including those for growth and employment. Price stability is defined by the government's inflation target of 2%. The remit recognizes the role of price stability in achieving economic stability more generally, and in providing the right conditions for sustainable growth in output and employment. The government's inflation target is announced each year by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Annual Budget statement.

Inflation target Yes.

Target number Yes.

UNITED KINGDOM

Point target	Yes.	The BOE pursues an explicit inflation target set by HMT – currently 2% on the CPI measure.
Target with tolerance band
Band/Range
Target measure	Yes.
CPI	Yes.	The inflation target of 2% is expressed in terms of an annual rate of inflation based on the CPI. The remit is not to achieve the lowest possible inflation rate. Inflation below the target of 2% is judged to be just as bad as inflation above the target. The inflation target is therefore symmetrical.
Core inflation
Target horizon	Yes.	A target of 2% does not mean that inflation will be held at this rate constantly. That would be neither possible nor desirable. Interest rates would be changing all the time, and by large amounts, causing unnecessary uncertainty and volatility in the economy. Even then it would not be possible to keep inflation at 2% in each and every month. Instead, the MPC’s aim is to set interest rates so that inflation can be brought back to target within a reasonable time period without creating undue instability in the economy. The inflation target is forward-looking to ensure inflation expectations are firmly anchored in the medium term. The government believes that low and stable medium-term inflation is an essential pre-requisite for economic prosperity.
Operating target (policy rate)	Yes.	The 1998 BOE Act made the BOE independent to set interest rates. The BOE is accountable to parliament and the wider public. The legislation provides that if, in extreme circumstances, the national interest demands it, the government has the power to give instructions to the BOE on interest rates for a limited period. The BOE seeks to meet the inflation target by setting an interest rate. The level of interest rates is decided by a special committee – the MPC. The MPC consists of nine members – five from the BOE and four external members appointed by the chancellor. It is chaired by the governor of the BOE. Decisions are made by a vote of the committee on a one-person one-vote basis. The MPC meets over three days eight times a year. The format of the meetings follows the recommendations of the Warsh Review and is set out in the BOE and Financial Services Act 2016. At the first meeting, normally held the Thursday prior to the MPC decision, the members discuss their views on how to interpret the most recent economic data. At the MPC’s second meeting – the first of the two policy meetings, normally held the following Monday – the MPC members debate on what the appropriate stance of the policy should be. The MPC’s final meeting – its second policy meeting – is normally held the Wednesday. Following further discussion on the appropriate stance of monetary policy, the governor puts to the meeting the policy which he believes will command a majority and members of the MPC vote. Any member in a minority is asked to say what level of interest rates he or she would have preferred. The decision is published at 12:00 noon the Thursday.
Policy rate	Yes.	As of September 22 2021, the BOE rate was 0.1%. It is paid overnight.
Target corridor band	No.
Other	No.

UNITED KINGDOM

Accountability	Yes.
Open letter	Yes.	Each year the Chancellor of the Exchequer writes a letter to the governor confirming the inflation target and the BOE's remit for monetary policy. If the target is missed by more than 1 percentage point on either side, that is, if the annual rate of CPI inflation is more than 3% or less than 1%, the governor of the BOE must write an open letter to the chancellor explaining the reason why inflation has increased or fallen to such an extent and what the BOE proposes to do to ensure inflation comes back to the target.
Parliamentary hearings	Yes.	Four times a year, typically when the BOE publishes its Monetary Policy Report (called the Inflation Report prior to November 2019), it also attends a public meeting with the House of Commons Treasury Committee.
Other	No.
Transparency	Yes.
Publication of votes	Yes.	The minutes of the MPC meetings publish the votes of the individual members of the Committee.
Publication of minutes	Yes.	The MPC is committed to the greatest possible degree of transparency around its decision-making. The minutes of the MPC meetings are published simultaneously with the interest rate decision. They also record the votes of the individual members of the Committee. The minutes give a full account of the policy discussion, including differences of view.
Publication of inflation forecasts	Yes.	In addition to the MPC minutes, the BOE publishes its Monetary Policy Report (called the Inflation Report prior to November 2019). This report gives an analysis of the UK economy and the factors influencing policy decisions. The Inflation Report also includes the MPC's latest forecasts for inflation and output growth.
Other monetary framework
Exchange tax	No.
Exchange subsidy	No.
Foreign exchange market	Yes.	Participants may freely determine their exchange rates and commissions in their transactions with clients. Where transactions take the form of Markets in Financial Instruments Directive (MiFID) business, including business that takes the form of ancillary services such as the MiFID Annex 1 B4 ancillary service of "foreign exchange services where these are connected to the provision of investment services," MiFID-based conduct requirements may apply, such as those in COBS 2.3.A.5R, 2.3.8R, and 4.5.10UK. Conduct-based requirements in the Principles for Businesses also apply.
Spot exchange market	Yes.	Foreign exchange bureaus engaged only in spot foreign exchange transactions are not subject to licensing or regulation by the BOE as CB, the Prudential Regulation Authority as prudential regulator, or the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) as financial conduct regulator. The UK version of Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 became effective December 31, 2020, without making changes to the regulation. Spot contracts which meet the criteria in the UK version Article 10(2) of Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 are specifically excluded from the scope of financial instruments for the purposes of MiFID II, so that firms only doing business in relation to such contracts are not subject to MiFID II-based authorization requirements.

UNITED KINGDOM

However, businesses that conduct spot foreign exchange transactions may engage in other activities that require FCA authorization. In addition, some firms may be subject to the separate authorization and registration obligations of the Payment Services Regulations 2017. Also, many foreign exchange bureaus that do not engage in activities that require FCA authorization must register with Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) under the Money Laundering, Terrorism Financing, and Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2017, which require foreign exchange bureaus (as well as money transmitters and check cashers) to investigate customers as part of customer due diligence. Banks and investment firms engaged in foreign exchange services connected with the provision of investment services are subject to certain conduct and other obligations for foreign exchange services pursuant to UK requirements imposed as part of MiFID II implementation and which form part of "retained EU law" under the EU (Withdrawal) Act 2018.

Operated by the central bank	No.

Interbank market	Yes.	The market is not formally regulated; participants are encouraged to adhere to the foreign exchange Global Code which is a voluntary code of conduct. Although the foreign exchange Global Code has no direct statutory underpinning, noncompliance (depending on the circumstances, seriousness, frequency, and duration of the incidents) may raise issues, such as the integrity or competence of a market firm, relevant to the firm's authorization requirements under the Financial Services and Markets Act of 2000 and the FCA's Principles for Businesses. The FCA recognizes the 2018 version of the Foreign Exchange Code, and not the new version that was updated in 2021 after the three-year review of the Foreign Exchange Global Code. The FCA will consider re-recognizing the new version of the Code from 2021 when the Bank applies for re-recognition. This means that behavior that is in line with the foreign exchange Global Code will tend to indicate that a person subject to the FCA's Senior Managers and Certification Regime (SM&amp;CR) is meeting their obligation to observe proper standards of market conduct under the FCA Principles for Business. The majority of the interbank market is made up of the 30 largest banks; however, hundreds of banks participate given the many small entities that are active.

Over the counter	Yes.	Trading in wholesale interbank spot foreign exchange is facilitated by a multivenue direct and intermediated market structure. A large number of trading platforms attract liquidity from wholesale institutions authorized by the Prudential Regulation Authority and the FCA. In recent years, high-frequency traders have taken a more active role in the market.
Brokerage	Yes.	The interbank market actively trades via brokers. Brokerage firms offer voice and electronic execution and provide multiclient trading venues.
Market making	Yes.	Many participants are market makers in the foreign exchange markets.

UNITED KINGDOM

Forward exchange market	Yes.	The forward exchange market for contracts falls outside the scope of financial instruments for the purpose of MiFID-based regulation where it amounts to a means of payment as set out in article 1 of the UK version of the Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 of April 25, 2016. The BOE participates in the forward foreign exchange market for reserves management and customer banking.

Inward direct investment	Yes.	Under the Enterprise Act of 2002, ministers have certain powers to intervene in mergers that raise specified public interest considerations. To date, four considerations have been specified: national security, plurality of the media, and financial stability, and, effective June 23, 2020, maintaining in the United Kingdom the capability to combat and to mitigate the effects of public health emergencies. Under Section 58 of the Enterprise Act, ministers may add considerations with parliamentary approval. Use of the intervention powers means the competition authorities must consider the public interest issue identified by the minister in addition to competition issues raised by the merger. Ministers are bound by the findings of the competition authorities on the competition issues raised by the case, but decide whether a merger should be cleared, cleared subject to conditions, or blocked on the grounds of the specified public interest consideration. There are statutory timetables for considering a case and reaching decisions. In addition, controls apply to the following: (1) non-EU investment in EU-based airlines is capped at 49% to ensure that the controlling stake remains within the EU; exceptions are allowed but require a signed agreement between the EU and the non-EU country; (2) investment in certain broadcasting licenses (including, in particular, commercial television, teletext, and radio licenses) other than by nationals of, or enterprises originating in, EU member countries; (3) acquisition of UK flag vessels, except through an enterprise incorporated in the United Kingdom; and (4) to the extent that under EC Directive No. 85/611, a depository of a UCITS must have its registered office either in the same EU country as that of the enterprise or be established in the EU country if its registered office is in another EU country. Restrictions apply to operations between residents of the Channel Islands and nonresidents: (1) Acquisition in Alderney of real property by non-EU nationals and enterprises from non-EU countries requires authorization unless the investor is forming or investing in a land-owning company. (2) Ownership in Sark of tenements is reserved for British nationals. Purchases of real estate in Jersey depend on economic and social needs tests or acquisition through the purchase of shares in a property holding company.

Credit controls	No.

Abroad by banks	No.
In banks by nonresidents	No.
Open foreign exchange position limits	Yes.	Net spot liabilities in foreign currencies (that is, the net amount of foreign currency resources funding sterling assets) form part of a bank's liabilities subject to a non-interest-bearing deposit requirement with the BOE. The required deposit is based on the average of reported eligible liabilities over a six-month period in excess of the equivalent of £600 million. This rule applies to building societies as well as to banks.
On resident assets and liabilities	Yes.	If the sum of an institution's overall net foreign exchange position and its net gold position exceeds a 2% threshold of own funds, the institution must calculate an own funds requirement for foreign exchange risk by multiplying the net open position by 8%. This requirement is applied to all firms and is reported via Common Reporting.
On nonresident assets and liabilities	Yes.	If the sum of an institution's overall net foreign exchange position and its net gold position exceeds a 2% threshold of own funds, the institution must calculate an own funds requirement for foreign exchange risk by multiplying the net open position by 8%. This requirement is applied to all firms and is reported via Common Reporting.
Provisions specific to institutional investors	Yes.
Insurance companies	Yes.	UK insurers are subject to Solvency II and are therefore subject to risk-based capital requirements to cover the risk of loss of own funds over a one-year period to the 99.5% confidence level. In addition to capital requirements, firms must ensure that their investments are consistent with the Prudent Person Principle, a qualitative set of risk management requirements.
Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents	No.
Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad	No.
Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally	No.
Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition	Yes.	UK insurers are subject to Solvency II and are therefore subject to capital requirements and the Prudent Person Principle. The most relevant requirement of the Prudent Person Principle in this case is the requirement that assets backing technical provisions (insurance liabilities) are invested in a manner appropriate to the nature and duration of the liabilities.
Pension funds	No.	The United Kingdom uses the Prudent Person Principle: There are no explicit quantitative restrictions on pension funds' investments. Firms that manage personal or stakeholder pensions are subject to FCA authorization and Prudential Regulation Authority Handbook requirements. There are also occupational pension schemes which are the regulatory responsibility of the Pensions Regulator and the restrictions imposed by the Occupational Pension Schemes (Investment) Regulations 2005 apply.

Investment firms and collective investment funds Yes.

There are no explicit limits on the amount of assets an investment firm may hold in the form of foreign exchange products or that must be held locally. However, investment firms subject to domestic requirements relating to the CRD (EU) No. 2013/36 (including the FCA Handbook and PRA Rulebook) and the UK version of the Capital Requirements Regulation No. 575/2013 (together known as CRD IV), including firms executing client orders, managing portfolios, and dealing on their own behalf, are subject to risk requirements comprising foreign exchange components and own funds requirements relating to foreign exchange. The UK version of the Capital Requirements Regulation No. 575/2013 came into force at 11pm on December 31, 2020 (Capital Requirements (Amendment) (EU Exit) Regulations 2018), whose aim was to enable continuity in the application of retained EU law in a way that took account of the UK's exit from the EU.

A new prudential regime for MiFID investment firms became effective January 1, 2021.

Authorized retail investment funds (UCITS and non-UCITS retail schemes) are subject to limits on investment in certain types of financial instruments pursuant to Chapter 5 of the FCA COLL sourcebook. There are also investment restrictions under the UK's qualified investor scheme regime pursuant to Chapter 8 of the FCA COLL sourcebook. Other such restrictions arise in the case of fund types in the form of the requirements of the UK versions of the following regulations, which came into force at 11pm on December 31, 2020, with the aim to enable continuity in law application after EU law ceased to apply to the United Kingdom: The Money Market Funds Regulation (EU) No. 2017/1131, the UK version of the European long-term investment funds Regulation (EU) No. 2015/760 ("LTIF Regulation"), the UK version of the European venture capital funds Regulation (EU) No. 345/2013 ("RVECA Regulation"), and the UK version of the European social entrepreneurship fund Regulation (EU) No. 346/2013 ("SEF Regulation"). As regards other collective investment funds, there are generally no regulatory limits on their investments in securities issued by nonresidents, investment portfolios held abroad, and asset and liability composition. A collective investment fund may also impose its own limits according to its prospectus and investment objectives, and managers of AIFs may be subject to the retained EU law requirements in respect of the AIFMD (EU) No. 2011/61. The UCITS and the AIFM directives ceased to apply as a matter of UK law as of 11pm on December 31, 2020. Amendments made by UK legislation were designed to ensure continuity for investors.

Free floating	Yes.	The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are free floating; the exchange rate of the US dollar is determined freely in the foreign exchange market. Foreign exchange interventions are not formally ruled out in the United States, but they are rarely used. The secretary of the Treasury is responsible for the formulation and implementation of international monetary and financial policy, including foreign exchange market intervention policy. The Federal Reserve (Fed) has separate legal authority to engage in foreign exchange operations, which are conducted in close and continuous consultation and cooperation with the Treasury to ensure consistency with US international monetary and financial policy. The Treasury and the Fed have closely coordinated their foreign exchange operations since early 1962, when the Fed commenced such operations at the request of the Treasury. Operations are conducted through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, as fiscal agent of the United States and as the operating arm of the Federal Reserve System. Interventions are announced when they occur, and the size of the interventions is reported in the Treasury and Federal Reserve Foreign Exchange Operations quarterly bulletin. US authorities last intervened in the foreign exchange market in March 2011, following the earthquake in Japan, in a coordinated G7 effort to sell Japanese yen. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York publishes quarterly reports on Treasury and Federal Reserve foreign exchange operations.
Official exchange rate	No.	The United States neither computes nor publishes an official or reference exchange rate.

Other monetary framework	Yes.	Monetary policy aims at maintaining the long-term growth of the monetary and credit aggregates commensurate with the economy's long-term potential to increase production, so as to promote maximum employment, stable prices, and moderate long-term interest rates. Effective August 27, 2020, the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) made modifications to its longer-term goals, which included targeting inflation that averages 2% over time, as measured by the annual change in the price index for personal consumption expenditures. Previously, inflation at the rate of 2% was considered most consistent over the longer term with the Fed's statutory mandate. In setting monetary policy, the FOMC will seek to mitigate deviations in inflation from its longer-term goal and employment shortfalls from the FOMC's assessment of its maximum level. FOMC meeting minutes are published online.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents	No.
Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad	Yes.	Most private sector US-based pension plans are subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). Except with respect to securities issued by a plan's sponsor (or an affiliate) and real estate leased to a sponsor (or an affiliate), ERISA does not impose quantitative limits on the percentage of plan assets that may be invested in particular types of assets. Instead, ERISA establishes a set of general principles (for example, prudence and diversification) that plan fiduciaries must observe in making and holding plan investments. ERISA also prohibits any fiduciary from maintaining the indicia of ownership of any assets of a plan outside the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, except as authorized by regulations issued by the secretary of labor.
Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally	No.
Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition	No.
Investment firms and collective investment funds	Yes.	As is the case with domestic securities, foreign securities must have a "ready market" or their value is deducted in full when computing a broker-dealer's regulatory "net capital." Securities that are listed on many major foreign securities exchanges are considered to have a ready market. In addition, securities that have a ready market are subject to haircut deductions that vary depending on the type of security. To account for currency risk, an additional haircut charge is required for securities denominated in a foreign currency. However, broker-dealers generally may reduce or eliminate the additional currency risk haircut charge by holding an offsetting position denominated in the same currency. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1, 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1. In addition, broker-dealers holding balances of foreign currency are subject to certain haircut deductions to account for currency risk. Broker-dealers apply a lower haircut for certain major foreign currencies, and securities denominated in those currencies, and a higher haircut for other foreign currencies and securities denominated in those foreign currencies. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1, 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1. A broker-dealer may pledge certain foreign sovereign debt and foreign currencies as collateral when borrowing fully paid securities from a customer. A certain amount of additional collateralization is required when the securities or currency that is pledged differs from the securities that are borrowed. See Securities Exchange Act Release No. 47683 (April 16, 2003). For purposes of this response, the term “broker-dealer” includes any entity registered with the US SEC as a broker or dealer.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents	Yes.	Although broker-dealers are not subject to a quantitative limit on the number or value of securities issued by nonresidents, foreign securities must have a “ready market” to have value for broker-dealer regulatory “net capital” purposes. Securities that are listed on many major foreign securities exchanges are considered to have a ready market.
Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad	Yes.	Although broker-dealers are not quantitatively limited as to the portion of their portfolio that can be held abroad, broker-dealers that hold securities abroad generally must have the foreign locations approved by the SEC. Securities that are listed on many major foreign securities exchanges are considered to have a ready market. See Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-3(c), 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1(c).
Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally	No.	Broker-dealers are not required to hold a minimum portion of their portfolio locally.
Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition	Yes.	To account for currency risk, an additional net capital charge is required for securities denominated in a foreign currency. However, broker-dealers generally may reduce or eliminate the additional currency risk haircut charge by holding an offsetting position denominated in the same currency. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1 (c)(2)(vi), 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1 (c)(2)(vi). In addition, broker-dealers holding balances of foreign currency are subject to certain deductions to account for currency risk. Broker-dealers apply a lower deduction for certain major foreign currencies and securities denominated in those currencies and a higher deduction for other foreign currencies and securities denominated in those foreign currencies. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1(c)(2)(vi), 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1(c)(2)(vi).

Monetary policy framework

Other monetary framework	08/27/2020	The Federal Open Market Committee made modifications to its longer-term goals, which included targeting inflation that averages 2% over time, as measured by the annual change in the price index for personal consumption expenditures. Previously, inflation at the rate of 2% was considered most consistent over the longer term with the Federal Reserve's statutory mandate.

Under Article 17 of Law No. 17,835 of September 23, 2004, on Strengthening the Control and Prevention of Money Laundering and Terrorism Financing, financial intermediation institutions are required to inform the Central Bank of Uruguay's (CBU's) FIU of assets linked to (1) persons identified as terrorists or as belonging to terrorist organizations on the relevant lists prepared by the UN and (2) persons declared terrorists by final decision of a national or foreign court of law. In addition, Article 6 authorizes the FIU to prevent all transactions giving rise to reasonable suspicion of a link with criminal organizations related to money laundering, as described in Article 17, from being carried out for a period of 72 hours. The law further provides that the FIU's decision must be communicated immediately to the criminal courts, which will determine whether the assets should be frozen without notice.

Floating Yes. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are floating. The exchange rate of the peso is determined on the basis of supply and demand, although the CBU reserves the right to intervene to cushion abrupt changes in a concentrated market of few transactions. The intervention currency is the US dollar. The CB can intervene in the exchange markets (spot as well as forward and future markets) to smooth excess exchange rate volatility without affecting its fundamentals-driven trends. During 2020, the peso depreciated against the US dollar 13.8%, because of the COVID-19 crisis and its impacts on financial markets. The CBU publishes information on intervention on its website on a daily basis, a few minutes after the market closed.

Free floating

Official exchange rate No. The exchange rate is freely determined by the market. The end-of-day official exchange rate is the weighted average of all spot operations undertaken in the interbank market (BEVSA, Bolsa Electrónica de Valores del Uruguay S.A., Electronic Stock Exchange).

Formal exchanges in the foreign currency market must accept offers to buy or sell foreign currency with a minimum price fluctuation of Ur$0.01 (US$0.01) of a preexisting offer, if the counterparty is dealing in pesos. Authorized intermediaries may freely determine the bid-ask spread and exchange commissions with their customers (Circular No. 2095).

Spot exchange market Yes. Institutions authorized to operate in the foreign exchange market are banks, finance houses, foreign financial institutions, financial intermediation cooperatives, financial services firms, and exchange houses. Eleven banks (including 2 state-owned), one finance house, one foreign financial institution, one financial intermediation cooperative, 22 financial services firms, and 52 exchange houses operate in the market. These institutions are supervised by the Superintendency of Financial Services. Exchange houses and financial service firms may deal with the CB by phone, maintain accounts abroad, and make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients.

Interbank market Yes. Sixteen authorized institutions (including 11 banks) may trade among themselves at freely determined rates through the BEVSA and may operate in the OTC market through dealers. Banks and provident savings fund administrators (administradoras de fondos de ahorro previo) are the primary interbank market participants. They determine the daily closing exchange rate, defined as a weighted average of the day's foreign exchange transactions, on the basis of their operations. The CBU grants the licenses. The minimum bid-ask spread is Ur$0.01. There are no limits on commissions, and each institution manages them independently. Generally, the CBU does not intervene in the spot foreign exchange market. But when it does, it intervenes directly with market participants at their quoted levels or proposes its own quotes. Authorized institutions are allowed to trade among themselves under the regulatory framework established by the CBU and BEVSA.

Forward exchange market	Yes.	The CBU established a market for forward purchases and sales of US dollars. The CBU resumed operations on the US dollar forward market on November 3, 2009, operating with foreign exchange forwards and being the main counterparty in all operations. In December 2010, it began operating with foreign exchange futures. These are standardized daily settlement contracts. Currently, the CBU trades futures and forwards (with and without delivery). Interbank swap operations have not yet been implemented. On December 3, 2018, the regulation authorized specialized investors to participate in the foreign exchange market. These are large enterprises whose business activity necessitates the use of hedging instruments. In addition, there are two formal venues for forward exchange market trading (BEVSA and UFEX), which employ the central counterparty method.

Reserve requirements	Yes.	Currently, the reserve requirements regime is in a transition toward the reduction of obligations in national currency (pesos and indexed units); this process will end in December 2021. As of 2022, the legal reserve rates for obligations in pesos and CPI-linked units (UI) of banks, financial intermediation cooperatives, and financial houses will be: 15% (Circular No. 2284), 3%, 2%, and 1% for obligations with maturities of less than 30 days, 30–90 days, 91–180 days, and 181 days less than 367 days, respectively (Circular No. 2376). For retail banks and retail financial intermediation cooperatives, these percentages will be: 15% (Circular No. 2252), 3%, 2%, and 1% for obligations with maturities of less than 30 days, 30–90 days, 91–180 days, and 181 days to less than 367 days, respectively (Circular No. 2376).

The reserve requirements for banks, financial intermediation cooperatives, and exchange houses on foreign currency liabilities to residents are 28% for terms of up to 180 days and 20% for longer terms (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224).

For retail banks and retail financial intermediation cooperatives on foreign currency liabilities to residents, the corresponding percentages are 12% for terms of up to 180 days and 7% for longer terms (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224).

Minimum reserve requirements for foreign currency liabilities to nonresidents are 28% (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224), calculated net of foreign assets in the currency in question.

Beginning in September 2013, following the issuance of Circular No. 2153, the minimum reserve requirements are computed contemporaneously and consist only of coins, banknotes, and demand deposits in the CBU. Term deposits are no longer accepted. The reserve in indexed units applies to liabilities of all maturities, including on demand. The reserve position is calculated by currency, according to the currency of the liability. The reserve position in pesos, foreign currency, and indexed units is based on the daily average for the month in question, including weekends and holidays. The domestic currency and the indexed unit are considered jointly. In the case of indexed units, liabilities are converted to pesos by multiplying by the value of each day. According to Communication No. 2016/074 and Circular No. 2230, the minimum reserve requirement in domestic currency earns interest at 5% per annum; the minimum reserve requirement in US dollars earns interest at 0.15% per annum, and for currencies other than the US dollar, it is calculated as the MPR minus 0.25% per annum. No interest is earned on required reserves in indexed units.

Liquid asset requirements	Yes.	In 2017, liquid assets requirements have been replaced by the LCR requirement. The LCR must be at least 80% in local currency and 100% in foreign currency and in total. A surplus in foreign currency can be computed to fund a deficit in local currency, providing the latter does not exceed 20%.
Interest rate controls	No.
Credit controls	No.

Open foreign exchange position limits	Yes.	Banks, finance houses, and financial intermediation cooperatives may not have asset or liability positions in foreign currency that exceed 150% of their net assets, minus operating fixed assets. The asset or liability position is the difference between assets—excluding operating fixed assets, given that they are not computed within assets—and liabilities. Part of the assets and liabilities in question consist of operations to be settled (basically OTC derivatives). The foreign currency position arising from these derivatives may not exceed the 150% limit. The foreign currency position arising from other assets and liabilities may not exceed 170% of the net assets, minus operating fixed assets. Operating fixed assets are claims more than two years overdue that have not been provisioned, investments in companies other than portfolio investment companies, assets constituting the category of property, plant and equipment, and intangible assets.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally	Yes.	No minimums are expressly established by the current laws and regulations. However, of the maximum for investment in foreign securities, set at 30%, at least 70% must be held locally.
Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition	Yes.	Insurance companies must match assets with liabilities in each currency. Nonpension obligations derived from insurance and reinsurance contracts payable in foreign currency, or in currency with a readjustment clause, must be covered by investments in the same currencies, with the same readjustment clauses or, failing that, in other currencies authorized by the Superintendency of Financial Services.
Pension funds	Yes.	For foreign currency, the same-day buy and sell ceiling for pension funds is 0.4% of assets or the equivalent of US$8 million. However, if 0.4% of assets is less than US$4 million, pension funds may trade up to that amount daily. Trading the same instrument on the same day is limited to 1.5% of the pension fund assets for the previous day. Pension funds are subdivided into accumulation funds and retirement funds, depending on the age of the contributor. Accumulation funds may invest up to 75% in government securities and 15% in instruments issued by multilateral institutions or foreign governments with high credit ratings. The maximum investment in

Crawl-like arrangement

Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The exchange rate is determined based on foreign currency supply and demand on Uzbekistan's currency exchange. The Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan (CBU) is a direct buyer of monetary gold produced in Uzbekistan, acting as supplier in the foreign exchange market in amounts equivalent to the value of gold purchased from producers. The CBU also intervenes in the foreign exchange market to smooth out undue short-term volatility. Foreign exchange sales by the CBU in the foreign exchange market are not directed at affecting the fundamental trend of the exchange rate and are driven exclusively by the aim of sterilizing additional liquidity from the CBU purchases of monetary gold. The exchange rate of the sum to the US dollar is used as an operational benchmark, because the vast majority of the country's trading operations are carried out in US dollars. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as crawl-like. Data on the CBU interventions are published on the CBU website in quarterly "Survey of the Domestic Exchange Market" publications.

Official exchange rate

Yes. The official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar, effective February 15, 2021, is determined by the CBU on a daily basis as the weighted average exchange rate based on trading on the Currency Exchange for the previous day, and it remains in effect until the exchange rate is determined on the following day. Exchange rates of other currencies are calculated using the cross rate with respect to the US dollar on the basis of the average rate as of 3:00 p.m. Tashkent time (on the day the rate is published) from the Refinitiv system (or Bloomberg). Previously, the official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar and the euro was determined by the CBU once a week as the weighted average exchange rate in trading sessions on the Currency Exchange for the previous week, and it remained in effect until the exchange rate was determined the following week. In the event that a change in the exchange rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange with respect to the CBU exchange rate exceeded 2%, the CBU set a new exchange rate for foreign currencies. The new CBU exchange rate was equal to the rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange on the day of a sharp change in the exchange rate of the foreign currency.

The CBU exchange rate is used for accounting purposes, statistical and other reporting on foreign exchange operations, and calculating customs and other mandatory payments within the Republic of Uzbekistan.

Monetary aggregate target

Inflation-targeting framework Yes. Effective January 1, 2021, the CBU started the transition to inflation targeting and set inflation targets of 10% for 2021 and 5% for 2023 (as per Decree of the President of November 18, 2019, No. UP-5877). At present, the monetary policy regime can be characterized as advanced transition toward inflation targeting.

Monetary policy decisions are made on the basis of forecasting and policy analysis systems (FPAS).

Previously, before 2018, the goal of the CBU was to ensure the stability of the national currency. Since 2018, the CBU oriented its monetary policy on the stability of prices in the economy. Since the start of 2020, the CBU's main objective is to lower the rate of inflation (as measured by the change in the CPI) to 5% by 2023 and to maintain it at that level, through the implementation of its monetary policy within an inflation-targeting regime.

Monetary policy is determined by deviations in intermediate inflation forecasts from the short-term and medium-term targets, using the new operational framework to achieve the operational goal via the management of short-term interest rates in the money market through a set of instruments introduced specifically for that purpose:

- the CBU's key rate and a symmetrical interest rate corridor of 2 percentage points (overnight lending and deposit facilities, at 1 percentage point higher and lower, respectively, than the CBU's key rate, which is at the center of the corridor);
- the CBU's money market operations with a term of two weeks at the CBU rate (repo/swap operations to provide needed liquidity for banks, and deposit auctions to mop up excess liquidity);
- standing facilities with a term of 1 day, forming the upper and lower bounds of the interest corridor.

CPI	Yes.	The inflation target is set in terms of the headline CPI and is measured as year-on-year rate of change. The CPI is calculated by the State Committee on Statistics, based on IMF standards (using fixed weights for all types of goods and services) according to the results of the observation of prices and rates. A representative sample of 510 types of goods and services is included in observations. Of those, 170 are foodstuffs, 250 are nonfoods, and 90 are services. In calculating CPIs, a modified Laspeyres formula with annual fixed weights is used. The structure of consumer spending based on household survey data is used as weights for calculating the indices.

Changes during 2020 and 2021

Exchange Arrangement

Official exchange rate	02/15/2021	The official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar is determined by the Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan (CBU) on a daily basis as the weighted average exchange rate based on trading on the currency exchange for the previous day, and it remains in effect until the exchange rate is determined on the following day. Previously, the official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar and the euro was determined by the CBU once a week as the weighted average of the exchange rate in trading sessions on the currency exchange for the previous week. In the event that a change in the exchange rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange with respect to the CBU exchange rate exceeded 2%, the CBU set a new exchange rate for foreign currencies. The new CBU exchange rate was equal to the rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange on the day of a sharp change in the exchange rate of the foreign currency.
Monetary policy framework

UZBEKISTAN

Inflation-targeting framework	01/01/2021	The Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan started the transition to an inflation-targeting monetary policy framework and set inflation targets of 10% for 2021 and 5% for 2023 (as per Decree of the President of November 18, 2019, No. UP-5877). At present, the monetary policy regime can be characterized as advanced transition toward inflation targeting.
Operating target (policy rate)
Policy rate	01/01/2021	In the inflation-targeting regime, the Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan's short-term rate is used as the main monetary policy instrument, and it is the key rate.
Foreign exchange market	01/29/2021	Trading in the currency exchange is performed according to the call auction (opening auction) and two-way continuous reverse auction (matching) methods. However, the CB acts in the Uzbek Republic Currency Exchange auctions only as a participant.
Spot exchange market
Operated by the central bank
Fixing	02/15/2021	There are no more fixing sessions on the Uzbek Republic Currency Exchange. Previously, if the total supply of foreign currency at the start of the trading session, based on bids placed before trading hours, exceeded total demand for it, the exchange operator raised the exchange rate of the foreign currency to the local currency, the sum (and vice versa). A fixed exchange rate for a foreign currency to the sum was set for current trading when a balance was reached between supply and demand for that foreign currency. In such cases, the exchange operator announced a fixing and declared an end to the trading session. The uniform exchange rate of the foreign currency to the sum, established by the fixing, was used for all the transactions concluded during the trading session.
Interbank market	09/01/2020	Foreign exchange operations in the domestic market are regulated by the Rules on Conducting Foreign Exchange Operations in the Republic of Uzbekistan (Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan (CBU) Resolution No. 3281 of September 31, 2020). Decree of the Cabinet of Ministers No. 294 of July 10, 2001, is no longer valid. The CBU continues to conduct foreign exchange interventions during the trading sessions on the Uzbek Republic Currency Exchange to sterilize excess liquidity from the purchase of monetary gold from local producers.

Exchange rate structure

Unitary

Multiple Yes. Complementary Floating Market Exchange Rate (DICOM) is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the Exchange Agreement (EA) No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM rate stood at BsF/US$5,189.56 (buying) and BsF/US$5202.57 (selling) on May 13, 2019. In addition to the official DICOM exchange rate, there is a parallel market that is widely used by the private sector and individuals. As of May 13, 2019, the parallel exchange rate stood at 5698.53 bolivars per dollar, according to DolarToday. Since March 10, 2016, the rate was established as the DICOM under Exchange Rate Agreement No. 35 of March 9, 2016 (G.O. No. 40.865 of the same date). Pursuant to Article 17 of that Agreement, until the alternative foreign exchange markets provided for in EA No. 33 are replaced, the DICOM will be the rate referenced in Article 24 of the latter EA. It should also be noted that pursuant to Article 13 of the aforesaid EA No. 35, all foreign exchange operations not expressly stated in the EA will be settled through the alternative foreign exchange markets regulated by the exchange regulations at the DICOM. The transactions of sale of foreign currency for payment of consumption and advances of cash with credit cards and acquisition of cash for minors, because of trips abroad, were applied the DICOM rate of exchange in effect at the time when the transaction is made or when the cash is delivered. The sale of foreign currency from the activities of exportation to the BCV made by natural persons and private legal persons was made at the DICOM rate of exchange reduced by 0.25%.
Individuals and private companies can buy and sell foreign currency through local commercial banks and exchange houses with no constraints on prices or amounts. The new market has been established where private foreign exchange buyers and sellers interacted under BCV's control. Individuals are still transacting small amounts in euros in cash in DICOM with government-owned banks. The BCV continues publishing the DICOM rate daily, resulting in two legal foreign exchange rates.

Article 33 indicates that the exchange rate to be used for foreign currency conversion for the determination of the amounts to be paid because of the customs and tax penalties regimes will be the DICOM exchange rate at the date of the corresponding sanction. The tax obligations established in special laws, as well as the rates, commissions, surcharges, and public prices that have been set in the corresponding regulations in foreign currency, may be paid alternatively in the currency in which they are denominated, in their equivalent in other foreign currency in accordance with the price published for that purpose by the BCV, or in bolivars applying the DICOM in force at the date of the transaction. Official exchange rate

Yes. DICOM is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the EA No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM rate stood at Bs/US$79,800 (buying) and Bs/US$80,000 (selling) on May 29, 2018. The operations of sale of foreign currencies to the BCV must be carried out at the exchange rate set forth in Article 11 of EA No. 39, reduced by 0.25% (EA No. 39, Article 28). The value of the exchange rate in bolivars resulting from the auction will be the lowest price proposed by the legal entities demanding foreign currency that is awarded, that is, the marginal value on the claims awarded to legal persons (EA No. 39, Article 3). All operations for settlement of foreign currencies not expressly provided for in this EA will be processed through the alternative markets regulated in the exchange regulations, at the DICOM (EA No. 39, Article 30). Pursuant to Article 17 of that Agreement the DICOM will be the rate referenced in Article 24 of the latter EA. It should also be noted that pursuant to Article 13 of the aforesaid EA No. 35, all foreign exchange operations not expressly stated in the EA will be settled

The sale of foreign currency from the activities of exportation to the BCV made by natural persons and private legal persons was made at the DICOM rate of exchange reduced by 0.25%.

As per BCV's Resolution No. 2019-05-01 establishes that the price published daily by BCV will be the official rate as per Article 9 of EA No. 1: New Exchange Framework. The BCV will publish a reference rate based on the daily weighted average exchange rate of the transactions conducted by exchange operators. The reference exchange rate must apply to all foreign currency settlement operations of public and private sector banks. Foreign currency sales operations carried out by the BCV will be carried out at the reference exchange rate, while foreign currency purchase operations will be at the reference rate reduced by 0.25%.

In comparison, DICOM was trading at only 80,000 bolivars per dollar during the same period. EA No. 39 regulates three types of transactions: (1) auctions of foreign currency, conducted through the new system at the supplementary floating market exchange rate (DICOM), (2) direct sales of foreign currency, and (3) transactions involving the negotiation in local currency of securities denominated in foreign currency issued by private sector issuers. EA No. 39 revokes EA Nos. 38 and 35. Article 37 stipulates that EA No. 39 has precedence over any other regulation issued in the past. Individuals and legal entities who wish to sell foreign currency for an amount of €8,500 or its equivalent in any other foreign currency, or less, can sell such foreign currency directly to the authorized exchange operators (which are, essentially, universal banks incorporated or domiciled in Venezuela and authorized to act in such capacity by the exchange control governmental authorities), at the DICOM exchange rate in force and effect as of the date of such sale, without having to resort for that purpose to the auctions of foreign currency conducted through the new DICOM system (EA No. 39, Article 15). The authorized exchange operators must make the sale of the foreign currencies received: (1) In the case of foreign currencies acquired on the occasion of the settlement of purchase operations through bank account transfers, they must be offered in full in the Market Floating Supplementary Exchange Rate System (DICOM), at the exchange rate of acquisition, increased by 1%. If said position is not awarded, it may be acquired by the BCV. (2) In the case of foreign currency in cash, they must be sold weekly to the BCV, at the exchange rate of acquisition, increased by 1%, under the terms indicated in the instructions issued for this purpose (EA No. 39, Article 15). The exchange rate of reference for the sale of the securities referred to in this Chapter must be that provided for in Article 11 of this EA, and the exchange rate applicable for the purchase must be the same rate of exchange reduced by 0.25%, applicable to the market value of the negotiable instrument, or to the value freely agreed by the parties involved in the transaction, when the instrument has no reference value in the market (EA No. 39, Article 22). Foreign exchange allocated by Centro Nacional de Comercio Exterior (National Foreign Trade Center—CENCOEX) is sold by foreign exchange dealers licensed by the BCV once CENCOEX has approved the foreign currencies in question. Trading, in domestic currency, of foreign exchange regulated by Chapter II of EA No. 33 of February 10, 2015 (Special G.O. No. 6.171 of the same date), is settled on the second business day following the agreement. Retail foreign exchange operations regulated by Chapter III of EA No. 33 of February 10, 2015 (Special G.O. No. 6.171 of the same date), are settled by foreign exchange dealers the same day. Trading, in domestic currency, of securities regulated by Chapter IV of EA No. 33 of February 10, 2015, (Special G.O. No. 6.171 of the same date) is settled three bank business days from the date of the agreement for value on that day.

Allocation Yes.

Allocations of foreign exchange are authorized by CENCOEX in accordance with the availability of foreign exchange and the country's needs.

DICOM is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the EA No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM system allows the sale and purchase of foreign currency (typically, euros) in exchange for local currency, through auctions of foreign currency administered, regulated, and directed by the Committee of Foreign Currency Auctions (the Committee), which is an internal specialized body within the BCV. Individuals and legal entities of the private sector can participate in the new DICOM system as offering parties (sellers) or bidding parties (purchasers) of foreign currency. On the other hand, public sector legal entities cannot participate in such system. To participate in the DICOM system, the respective person must electronically register with the system and provide certain information, make a sworn statement as to the origin and destination of the funds, hold a demand or term account denominated in foreign currency with a universal bank organized or domiciled in Venezuela and authorized to operate as such under Venezuelan banking legislation (a Local Account in Foreign Currency), and be up to date with the national tax obligations and the social security. The Committee must call auctions at least once a week and the calls must be made two banking days prior to the date of the auction. To participate in an auction of foreign currency, the bidding parties (purchasers) of foreign currency must submit their bids in terms of price and amount, and the offering parties (sellers) of foreign currency must submit their offers in terms of amount, electronically through the system, and indicate the validity term for their bids and offers (which can be no less than seven days nor greater than 30 days). The award of foreign currency starts by awarding foreign currency to the purchaser–bidders of foreign currency who have submitted bids for the highest admissible exchange rate and thereafter to the other purchaser–bidders of foreign currency based on the exchange rate submitted in their bids from the highest to the lowest exchange rate, until the point where the foreign currency offered (and, therefore, the foreign currency that can be awarded) at the respective auction is exhausted. In addition, the system is designed so that at least 10% of the foreign currency offered at each auction is awarded to individuals. The exchange rate applicable to each sale and purchase transaction of foreign currency conducted through the auctions can differ for each transaction because the same will be, for each such transaction, the exchange rate that the respective purchasing–bidding party of foreign currency, to whom the foreign currency has been awarded, submitted in its bid. The settlement of the foreign currency awarded through the auctions will be made by crediting them to a Local Account in Foreign Currency. The auctions of foreign currency are conducted on the basis of a floating exchange rate system, based on an American auction type, where the offer (sale) and demand (purchase) bids of foreign currency are technologically matched (EA No. 39, Article 2). The BCV publishes on its website the exchange rate resulting from every auction of foreign currency. This exchange rate will be the lowest exchange rate at which a bid for the purchase of foreign currency was submitted in the auction by a legal entity (as opposed to by an individual) and was awarded foreign currency at the auction (which the rules refer to as the “marginal value of the awarded bids”). The exchange rate in force and effect at any given moment will be this exchange rate published by the BCV for the latest auction conducted as of the relevant moment (EA No. 39, Article 3). The Committee has discretion to determine the methodology for the award of the foreign currency under the new DICOM system. The DICOM system has limitations on the maximum amount of foreign currency purchases made through it. Individuals can purchase up to a maximum of €420 or its equivalent in any other foreign currency a calendar quarter. Private sector legal entities can purchase a monthly amount equal to 30% of the average monthly gross income declared for income tax purposes in the immediately preceding fiscal year, provided such amount does not exceed €340,000 or its equivalent in any other foreign currency a month. On the other hand, the said system has no limitations on the maximum amount of the sales of foreign currency (EA No. 39, Article 9). The current exchange rate will be that of the last auction. As well as the amounts awarded of foreign currencies, the list of individuals and legal entities (who won the auction) will be published on the website of the BCV, as well as on the website www.dicom.gob.ve, of the Market Floating Complementary Exchange Rate System (DICOM), corresponding to every auction made (EA No. 39, Article 11). ### Resident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted Yes.

Held domestically Yes.

Exchange Rate Agreement No. 20, which came into force in June 2012, allowed accounts in foreign currency under certain conditions. Legal entities not domiciled in the national territory could maintain accounts in foreign currency sourced from abroad and could mobilize them only through total or partial withdrawals in Venezuelan legal tender at the current exchange rate. The law also allowed resident legal entities and natural persons to maintain foreign currency accounts, but the funds had to come from the settlement of securities issued by the government or another entity through the official systems for receiving foreign currency.

This agreement established the maintenance of foreign currency in the universal banks but did not allow operations or transactions in foreign currency. Deposits could be mobilized exclusively through their withdrawal in bolívares. Likewise, banks with deposits in foreign currency had to keep them in foreign currency accounts at the BCV.

With the repeal of the Law of the Exchange Regime and its Illicit Acts in 2018, new rules were established for the market, which contemplated the free convertibility of the currency in the national territory and the centralization in the BCV of purchases and sales of foreign currency by the universal banks. This agreement allowed citizens to use foreign currency for daily operations and led to a significant increase in dollarization in the country.

Regarding possession of accounts in dollars, the new exchange agreement allows individuals within Venezuela, as well as national and foreign legal entities, to maintain accounts in foreign currencies sourced from abroad or from the Venezuelan financial system itself. These funds may be mobilized by means of transfers and checks from the bank with its correspondents abroad.

In 2019, a number of different national banks offered accounts to legal entities to deposit their foreign currency cash. These accounts are called “free convertibility accounts” and are used mostly by the private sector.

At the beginning of 2020, the list of banks offering accounts for the deposit of foreign currency in cash was expanded. Effective October 9, 2020, the BCV issued a circular ordering the cessation of products or services that facilitated payment for goods and services in Venezuela in foreign currency through local agents' foreign currency accounts in domestic banks. The "free convertible accounts" were maintained, but their only function is to safeguard such money, and they may not be mobilized or used in transactions, except through physical withdrawals or deposits or transfers from branches abroad.

Foreign exchange accounts may be held in the national financial system by (1) individuals who are of age and resident in the national territory and legal entities domiciled in the country; (2) Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. and its subsidiaries; (3) public sector agencies and entities with BCV authorization or with an account with the BCV; and (4) Venezuelan nationals with a license from the Ministry of Popular Power for Petroleum and Mines to engage in the activities referred to in Chapter V of the Organic Law on Gaseous Hydrocarbons.

New measures announced in January 2021 allow accounts in foreign currency, but transfers and other operations in foreign currency between local banks are not yet authorized.

Approval required

Yes.

Approval is required in the following cases: Public sector entities require the authorization of the board of directors of the BCV (except in cases in which the foreign exchange account is held with the BCV). Resolution No. 13-07-02 of July 25, 2013, issued by the BCV sets out provisions on the holding by the public sector of foreign currency funds in any form, establishing that these funds may be held in accounts opened for that purpose with the BCV, in universal banks in the domestic banking system, or in financial institutions abroad. The circular issued by the BCV on August 10, 2015, regulates the requirements for public sector entities subject to the measure for the centralization of foreign exchange and public banking institutions designated by said entities as banking agents for the provision of financial services on special foreign exchange accounts to be held with the BCV, for compliance with the aforementioned measure, and the execution of financial services on the aforementioned accounts. Article 1 of EA No. 13 of December 3, 2009, establishes that the board of directors of the BCV may authorize private sector legal entities to hold foreign exchange accounts with the BCV.

PDVSA may hold foreign currency funds with the approval of the Board of Directors of the BCV, along with its subsidiaries. In accordance with Article 5 of EA No. 9, companies created under partnership agreements signed by PDVSA under the framework of the now repealed Organic Law Reserving Industry and Trade in Hydrocarbons for the State, semipublic enterprises referred to in the Organic Law on Hydrocarbons and the Organic Law on Gaseous Hydrocarbons, and semipublic enterprises created under the provisions of the Decree with the Status, Effect and Force of Organic Law for the Development of Petrochemical Activities may, for purposes of

Floating	Yes.	The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The Central Bank of Yemen (CBY) receives most of the foreign exchange proceeds, particularly crude oil export revenues, official loans, and official development assistance. In August 2017, the CBY decided to float the exchange rate. Nonetheless, different non-market official exchange rates have been used for different purposes, including time-varying official exchange rates for letters of credit to food importers between 2018 and 2021. The CBY has also used different official exchange rates for the government's foreign exchange transactions. In June 2021, the official midpoint rate for customs related transactions was 250 Yrls per U.S. Dollar, while the official exchange rate for oil-related transactions stood at 400 Yrls per U.S. Dollar. Because of the conflict and economic instability, market rates started diverging from the official rate in 2015. Based on daily market exchange rate data, which has become available since September 2018, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified retroactively to floating from stabilized, effective September 3, 2018.

Free floating

Yes.

The authorities operate a non-market exchange rate system for foreign exchange transactions of the budget, including oil (400 rials per dollar) and customs revenues (500 rials per dollar). Similarly, a non-market exchange rate of 400 rials per dollar is applied to foreign exchange expenditures. Moreover, foreign exchange has been allocated to private food importers at time-varying non-market official exchange rates. The market rate, as determined by foreign exchange bureaus, has been substantially above these official rates.

Monetary aggregate target

Yes.

The main mission of the CBY, as set forth in Law No. (14) of 2000, is to maintain price stability by keeping inflation rates low. It aims to achieve this goal through monetary targeting. In 2020, the Central Bank began targeting the growth rate of the money supply (broad money) as an intermediate target; base money growth is used as an operational target. For CY2021, the annual monetary plan projected broad and base money to grow by 18.3% and 19.1%, respectively, consistent with the average inflation rate of approximately 25%. This plan was the second since the Central Bank relocated to Aden. The plans have focused on controlling the money supply in a manner consistent with the real economic needs emanating from both public and private sectors. These plans remain a core part of CBY's strategy moving forward. In the absence of a foreign reserve buffer, strong commitment to the annual monetary plan targets remains the only tool at CBY's disposal to attempt to contain inflationary pressures and stabilize exchange rate movements. The CBY remains committed to its effective implementation.

Changes during 2020 and 2021

Exchange Arrangement

Classification

Floating	01/01/2020	The de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified retroactively to floating from stabilized, effective September 3, 2018. The change is reflected as of January 1, 2020, corresponding to the first day of the period covered in this year's Annual Report on Exchange Arrangements and Exchange Restrictions.

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices	Yes.	The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Zambia, states that as of August 2, 2019, Zambia maintained an exchange restriction, which is subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, arising from limitations imposed by the government on access to foreign exchange for the making of payments and transfers for current international transactions, which is evidenced by the existence of external payments arrears accumulated prior to October 4, 1985. Stabilized arrangement

Crawl-like arrangement	Yes.	The de jure exchange rate arrangements is classified as floating. The official exchange rate is determined in the interbank market. The Bank of Zambia (BOZ) intervenes primarily through transactions with ADs, which are registered commercial banks that meet the prescribed eligibility criteria under the Interbank Foreign Exchange

Market (IFEM) Framework. The BOZ interventions are published on a biweekly basis with a 3-month lag.

The foreign exchange market was characterized by persistent and widening imbalances in liquidity flows especially in the second half of 2020. Excess demand, mostly for imports of petroleum products and agricultural inputs, built-up while supply fell and adverse market sentiments exacerbated exchange rate pressures.

To dampen volatility in the exchange rate, the BOZ:

- (1) Scaled up interventions in the foreign exchange market;
- (2) Amended pricing rules governing the IFEM requiring ADs to transact at prevailing market rates. ADs are required to buy foreign exchange from retail and corporate clients at rates not exceeding the interbank bid price and sell at rates not exceeding the retail board offer rate;
- (3) Introduced additional standards of professional and ethical conduct for market players to enhance market discipline. ADs are required to disclose any investigations, litigation, arbitration, complaints, disciplinary proceedings or other matters relating to professional conduct. This is intended to hold commercial banks accountable for any breaches of the IFEM Rules; and
- (4) Introduced the requirement to register all foreign exchange brokers operating in the domestic market to enhance transparency in the market.

While more volatility has been experienced since 2021 H2, between August 2020 and April 2021, the exchange rate followed a depreciating trend within a 2% band against the US dollar with one realignment in November 2020. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement for this period was reclassified to “crawl-like” from “floating,” effective August 24, 2020.

Official exchange rate

Yes.

The foreign exchange interbank rates are used to determine the BOZ official exchange rates: The BOZ buying rate is the simple average of the AD bid rates, and the selling rate is the simple average of the AD offer rates. The simple averages of the real-time rates collected from the ADs are published on the BOZ website as official rates. The daily official publication times on the BOZ website for 09:30 hrs, 12:30 hrs, and 15:30 hrs are simple averages of the real-time rates collected from the ADs at these respective times. Transactions between the BOZ and the market, and between the BOZ and the government use the mid-exchange (official) rate, calculated as the average of the bid and offer exchange rate quotes provided by ADs in the IFEM. Other members of the public like research institutions and academia use historical exchange rate data published on the BOZ website to conduct research work. In some instances, members of the public request for this information to facilitate awards and compensation for court cases.

Other monetary framework	Yes.	In April 2012, the BOZ introduced the policy rate as a key policy instrument to signal the monetary policy stance and anchor inflation expectations. Under this framework, the BOZ manages liquidity conditions in the market so as to ensure that the interbank rate remains within the policy rate corridor, defined as <math>\pm 2</math> percentage points around the policy rate. The policy rate corridor is <math>\pm 1</math> percentage point around the policy rate. Government, through the Minister of Finance, sets the inflation target range. The Board of the BOZ is composed of the Governor, who is the Chairperson, and six other Directors appointed by the Minister of Finance. The Directors are appointed from among persons with professional or academic experience in business or financial matters and who are not officials or employees of the Bank. The Secretary of the Treasury is an ex-officio member of the Board and without power to vote and does not count for a quorum. In Zambia, the price stability objective is attained through the achievement and maintenance of inflation within the target range of 6%–8%. Bi-annual publication of the Monetary Policy Statement as required by Law. Currently, the BOZ publishes its inflation forecasts for a period of six months in its Monetary Policy Statement and for eight quarters in the Monetary Policy Committee Statement.

For amounts outside the market lot, the two-way quote provided is subject to negotiation. Effective March 24, 2020, the BOZ introduced additional standards of professional and ethical conduct for market players to enhance market discipline. ADs are required to disclose any investigations, litigation, arbitration, complaints, disciplinary proceedings, or other matters relating to professional conduct. This is intended to hold commercial banks accountable for any breaches of the IFEM Rules. To dampen volatility in the exchange rate, the pricing rules governing the IFEM were amended effective November 6, 2020, requiring ADs to transact at prevailing market rates. ADs are required to buy foreign exchange from retail and corporate clients at rates not exceeding the interbank bid price and sell at rates not exceeding the retail board offer rate. Previously, in line with the IFEM Rules from July 2003, ADs were required to quote firm bid (buying) and offer (selling) rates at all times based on the prevailing market threshold. Deals for amounts outside the marketable threshold were declared before requesting a price and negotiated between the parties involved.
Spot exchange market	Yes.	Seventeen commercial banks are licensed by the BOZ to trade in the IFEM. Commercial banks are the only financial institutions that may engage directly with the BOZ in buying and selling foreign exchange. Foreign exchange bureaus may operate in Zambia and are also licensed by the BOZ. As of December 31, 2020, there were 72 licensed exchange bureaus. ## Exchange Arrangement

Classification

Crawl-like arrangement	08/24/2020	While more volatility has been experienced since 2021 H2, between August 2020 and April 2021, the exchange rate followed a depreciating trend within a 2% band against the US dollar with one realignment in November 2020. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified to “crawl-like” from “floating.”
Foreign exchange market	03/24/2020	The Bank of Zambia introduced additional standards of professional and ethical conduct for market players to enhance market discipline. ADs are required to disclose any investigations, litigation, arbitration, complaints, disciplinary proceedings, or other matters relating to professional conduct. This is intended to hold commercial banks accountable for any breaches of the Interbank Foreign Exchange Market (IFEM) Rules.
	11/06/2020	To dampen volatility in the exchange rate, the pricing rules governing the Interbank Foreign Exchange Market (IFEM) were amended, requiring ADs to transact at prevailing market rates. ADs are required to buy foreign exchange from retail and corporate clients at rates not exceeding the interbank bid price and sell at rates not exceeding the retail board offer rate. Previously, in line with the IFEM Rules from July 2003, ADs were required to quote firm bid (buying) and offer (selling) rates at all times based on the prevailing market threshold. Deals for amounts outside the marketable threshold were declared before requesting a price and negotiated between the parties involved.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices	Yes.	IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Zimbabwe, states that, as of February 12, 2020, Zimbabwe continues to maintain a series of measures that give rise to several exchange restrictions and MCPs, inconsistent with Article VIII, Section 2(a) and Section 3, in particular: b(1) Under the official guidance issued by the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe (RBZ), commercial banks are required to prioritize their foreign exchange sale to finance specific categories of international transactions which constitutes an exchange restriction as it limits the availability of foreign exchange for payments and transfers for current international transactions, in particular in the non-priority or low priority categories. Further, the prioritization also results in an MCP as it channels some of the non-priority or low-priority transactions to the bureau market which has an exchange rate of more than 2% in excess of that in the interbank market. (2) The RBZ also allocates foreign exchange to finance certain necessity imports, and purchases repatriated foreign exchange proceeds that exporters are required to sell (surrender) to the RBZ, at the prior business date's interbank rate. These allocation and purchase transactions at the prior business date's interbank rate constitute an MCP as this rate has recently deviated and may continue to deviate by more than 2% from the prevailing foreign exchange rate for other foreign exchange transactions taking place on the same date. The foreign exchange allocation here also gives rise to an exchange restriction as it limits the availability of foreign exchange for payments and transfers for other current international transactions not eligible to receive such allocation. (3) Zimbabwe has also a longstanding exchange restriction subject to IMF jurisdiction arising from unsettled balances under an inoperative bilateral payment agreement with Malaysia. (Country Report No. 20/82)

Smelting of gold or articles containing gold requires a license from a district commissioner in accordance with the Second-hand Goods Act, which authorizes the possession of smelting equipment. The 2014 National Budget Statement presented by the minister of finance and economic development on December 19, 2013, states that only Fidelity Printers and Refiners (a subsidiary of the CB) may buy and export gold.
